

Hello hello! I'm Abrar and I'm finishing up my first year of medicine at the University of Alberta! I'm so excited to be running in the CFMS election this year. I'll spare the technical details for my platform and CV. So instead, I'll talk a little more about myself. I think it's important to get to know who you're voting for rather than just the promises they're making. For instance: Do they put pineapple on their pizza? Do they clap when the plane lands? I can assure you I do neither of these things (unless you need me to).

Some people like to classify me as a jack of all trades. I'm all about trying new things. I also love getting to know different people and their stories (if we meet this year, I will definitely ask you for your favourite meme). I'm very big into trivia, listening to all genres of music, and going on adventures. My sporadic interests are probably what attracted me to the CFMS. The ability to work in a diverse portfolio, with a diverse team of volunteers, representing a diverse group of students throughout the country. I get to dip my feet into various projects, sit on different committees, and make real changes. Most importantly, I'm not just here to do my role. I'm here to get to know who you are and what I can do to better your experience in medicine. Thanks for reading and I hope we get to meet one day!
